All of us want to live safely and securely in our homes and communities as we get older. Affordability, physical accessibility, and access to medical and other services inside and outside the home can add significant challenges. Those of us in exurban and rural areas may struggle with isolation from neighbors, services, and other amenities.

Beyond where and how we live, promoting home ownership is critical to economic security and creating generational wealth. As such, it represents a strategy for addressing not only the basic housing needs of older people, but redressing long-standing, systemic financial inequities and racism.

Stability in Aging was launched in Fall 2020 to gather our collective knowledge, experience, and resources to both strengthen funding in this critical area and identify ways philanthropy can create new synergies and collective approaches to housing.

Special thanks to the collaborative’s generous funders:

- The May and Stanley Smith Charitable Trust
- RRF Foundation for Aging
- The Harry and Jeanette Weinberg Foundation
- Capital Impact Partners
